An Inglish "Capitalist" in Tennessee, The person referred to in the following interesting narrative from the Nashville Banner of July 6th, was about here a few weeks ago. He represented that the object of his visit was to establish business relations, which would probably expand into great magnitude.

The Nashville Banner says:

Most of our citizens will remember the last fall, and who excited considerable interest | may be found from 8 a, m., to 6 p. m , daily. among our moneyed men not less by the magnificence of his plans than by his supposed inexhaustible resources. It was understood he was to completely regenerate Tennessee in an agricultural and stock raising point of view .-Capital-"the thing needful"-had come among us in the shape of millions of English gold. Speculators were on the qui vice, and real estate agents took courage. The new comer's auger was a big one -how it bored we propose to show.

In the French Broad valley, East Tennessee, he selected the scene of his preliminary operations. Representing himself as a man of tain his supplies as well by correspondence as means, he bought of General A. E. Smith a though he were to purchase in person. magnificent farm of four hundred acres, situated in the forks of the French Broad and Pigeon rivers. He covenanted to give for this land $23,000 in gold. to be paid in three annual payments. Adjacent to this tract, and lying on the banks of the French Broad, he rented from three other parties some eleven hundred acres of rich and mostly all bottom lands, acres of rich and mostly all bottom lands, the price of that article. agreeing to pay heavy rents. Having thus secured in all about fifteen hundred acres of the finest land in that fertile valley, he began a system of extensive, costly improvements, unexampled in this State. During the winter States, induces me to ask the farmer to test it he brought his family from England, attended | alongside of any manure he may apply. by a governess and one or two servants. Early in the spring he improved the farm-house, making it a very neat and comfortable house. His expenditures in this respect were not at all in proportion to other outlays, making his course the more remarkable and mysterious.

Having secured the lands above mentioned, he announced to the goodly neighbors around him that he would teach them how to work a farm with labor saving machines and the help of latter day developments. New machinery of every kind and in great abundance was bought in Cincinnati and New York, and forwarded at heavy expense; revolving ploughs and subsoil ploughs, corn ploughs and cultivators, corn planters and wheat drills, mowing machines and reapers, thrashers and separators, and machines of every kind were brought to the "farms." Phosphate of lime, kiln burnt lime and manure were plentifully used. The bottoms were all drained, fences ditched, and woods grubbed and underbush cut away .-Scores of men were hired at high wages, and kept busy perfecting improvements and planning new ones. The best horses, inules and oxen were bought at high prices. Heavy, durable wagons were brought from the North which has never been opened.

All his expenditures were extravagant.-Everything he did was done on a grand scale, befitting one of his pretensions.

He bought and leased these lands in the fall of 1866; his family came in February; these improvements and expenditures continued through several months; he made heavy purchases and heavy expenditures; handled a great deal of money, made heavy debts, and at this writing his whereabouts is unknownhis object and motive in all that he has done are a perfect mystery.

ble purpose of procuring money, which he claimed was on the way from England. The day following his wife and children, with her sister, started for England. Developments lately made prove that he is His wife is the daughter of J. H. Lloyd, a member of the bar of London, and a man of CHARLES W. GREEN, wealth. It is now believed that she has been for some time dissatisfied with his actions.

Her father had been withholding this for sometime, dissatisfied with his | Try it. son-in-law's operations; but the latter came to this country and plunged into this speculation SMALL SUGAR-CURED HAMS, this country and plunged into this speculation George & Jenkin's Family Lard, with the hope that his father-in-law would relieve him when he became embarrassed .-This is the only charitable solution that can be given to his acts. His debts, assumed in all, amount to over $60,000. He paid out a great deal of money, but all that he paid out he obtained from banks and other sources, on representation of wealth in England, and his property, amounting to about $20,000, is now being fought for by his creditors. All things considered, this man's operations were more like a wild, visionary adventure than a swindle. He was a monomaniae. He pictured himself the lord of this fertile valley. His horses were to be stronger and heavier than any other. His cattle were to be better D and more numerous. His sheep were to cover the hills and shear innumerable fleeces. His lands were to be richer and better cultivated than any other. His grains were to stock the markets of the South, and railroads and drivers were to be busied with transporting his harvest. There, in the midst of grand mountains, and in that beautiful valley, he was to have a paradise unequalled on the continent. He was recently arrested in New York and Baltimore for obtaining money under false pretences. He was bailed, and is now probably in Europe. His failure, and his wild, reckless operations stamp him as an adventurer. As such his experiences are novel and interesting.

It contains a large amount of animal matter in a highly concentrated form, which, combined with its soluble bone phosphate of lime, cannot fail to render it very valuable as a fertilizer.— Notwithstanding we believe it to be the best super-phosphate in the market, yet, by a process peculiar in its manufacture, whereby the expenses are lessened, we are enabled to sell it very low, with a liberal discount to dealers.
